

Stories of Illness & Health

Wednesday, Mar. 19, 2014
at 6:30 pm

Wolf Performance Hall
London Public Library
(Central Branch)

How does the art of storytelling improve health care education and the experience of patient care? In what ways are doctors, patients, and other health professionals storytellers? How can researchers, educators, students, and members of the greater public work together to produce compassionate approaches to patient-centred care?

Stories of Illness & Health at Western invites members of the public, both campus and community, to join us to experience the stories of people living with illness. Through stories shared by participants who have dealt with chronic or acute conditions, audience members will hear first-hand accounts of what is important to patients throughout their health care experience. Following each story, we will invite the audience to reflect on their experience of each narrative and engage in an open dialogue with our storytellers.

Our moderator for the evening will be Dr. Jeff Nisker, Professor of Obstetrics-Gynaecology at the Schulich School of Medicine & Dentistry and Scientist at the Children's Health Research Institute.

THIS EVENT WILL BE VIDEOTAPED FOR EDUCATIONAL PURPOSES.

THIS EVENT IS FREE AND OPEN TO CAMPUS AND COMMUNITY

Public Humanities
@ WESTERN

Western
Arts & Humanities

London Health Sciences Centre

Schulich
MEDICINE & DENTISTRY

THANK YOU TO OUR PARTNERS: Schulich School of Medicine & Dentistry, the Faculty of Arts and Humanities, the London Health Sciences Centre, the Public Humanities at Western, and the Narrative Medicine Initiative.

All questions can be sent to publichumanities@uwo.ca

Visit us at: uwo.ca/publichumanities

